

Civil Rights & Restorative Justice Project
Northeastern University School of Law
Workshop Series
2018

Venue: 360 Dockser Hall, Northeastern University School of Law
Wednesdays: October 24, November 14, December 12, 2018
4:00 – 5:30 pm

Bringing together researchers, students, and invited guests in the fields of civil rights and historical injustices, the workshop series is designed to discuss in an informal setting new research projects. A short presentation will focus on methodological, design or theoretical problems the researcher is facing and invite interdisciplinary thinking and discussion.

- October 24: Lift Every Voice: A Way to Meaningful Repair
Linda J. Mann, Visiting Scholar, Alliance for Historical Dialogue & Accountability at Columbia University; VP of Research for the Georgetown Memory Project (GMP)
Dr. Mann will discuss the GMP's project identifying and locating 300 enslaved people sold by Georgetown University and the Maryland Jesuits to plantations in Louisiana in 1838 and tracing their direct descendants.
- November 14: Freedom's Cost: Children & Youth in the Black Freedom Struggle
Francoise Hamlin, Africana Studies and History, Brown University
Dr. Hamlin's project positions children and youth at the center of the postwar African American civil rights movements by addressing activism's personal and communal costs.
- December 12: Silences and Erasures
Diane Harriford, Africana Studies, Women's Studies and Sociology, Vassar College; Visiting Scholar, CRRJ
Dr. Harriford is utilizing the CRRJ-Nobles Archive to examine the intersection of gender and sexuality with the racial violence documented there. She explores, in the context of this violence, women's resistance, the impact of heterosexual or homosexual affective ties across race, and black and white masculine identity.

If you plan to attend please RSVP at crrj@northeastern.edu with your name and the session.
